Subject contents	An attempt to synthesize art from the second half of the 18th century to the beginning of the 20th century in the fields of painting, sculpture, graphic arts, architecture, applied arts, and design. The arrangement of topics is based on the chronology of artistic phenomena, partly based on a chronological and linear overview, as well as through the selection and highlighting of individual issues, trends, currents, phenomena, and artistic formations that are most important from the point of view of their consequences for contemporary art. Key issues: - new aesthetics, definitions and functions of works of art, as well as the development of a new audience in the industrial world - the changing status and role of the artist and the associated new creative strategies - the problem of artistic movements from the Nazarenes to the Fauvists - institutional changes in art in the 19th and early 20th centuries - changes in the function of art in industrial society and in connection with the new concept of history and nation - the development of new and changes in traditional artistic forms - the problem of historicism in connection with the formation of the modern concept of nation - variants and functions of historicist architecture- Pugin Viollet le Duc Semper: three variants of combining historicism with modernity - Classicism versus Romanticism in early 19th-century art - Variants of Classicism in 19th- and early 20th-century art - Biedermeier as an artistic movement- the impact of industrialization and its social consequences on art - the Arts & Crafts movement in Great Britain and its counterparts in other countries and their impact on art - Art Nouveau as an art renewal movement - Werkbund and so-called reform architecture - Cubism, the avant-garde before World War I, and the beginnings of abstraction Further topics, clarifying the above, will be presented successively during the course. The approach to the topics involves focusing on selected artists and works of art that exemplify particular issues.
