Subject objectives	To learn an overview of the history of German philosophy in the context of the general history of philosophy as an introduction to one's own inquiries in this subject area. The basic premise of the lecture thus becomes the student's introduction to a specific area of knowledge. The aim of the course is both to provide in-depth knowledge and the development of general cultural competence, to broaden one's horizons, to assimilate philosophical concepts and to achieve a basic ability to orient oneself in philosophical concepts and texts, as well as the ability to respond to theses put forward by philosophers.
