| Subject objectives                          | The student learns about sociological notions of social differences. They are aware of and capable of distinguishing between stratification and class approaches. They understand what social strata are and how they have been defined. They can identify various dimensions of social differentiation. They can apply theoretical approaches to the reality around them. The student is able to critically reflect on simplified approaches to social differentiation (reducing social divisions to two or three large groups). |                                                          |                                         |                                     |         |                                                                                                                      |     |
