Subject objectives	The primary objective of the seminar is to prepare students to independently write a master's thesis of high substantive quality. The topics covered include issues related to the methodology of writing a scientific paper, in particular the characteristics of scientific style, the rules for compiling a bibliography and footnotes, as well as a discussion of the rules for working with sources and the rules for analyzing views expressed in the literature and legal regulations, which are necessary for drawing independent conclusions to be presented in the master's thesis.

Learning outcomes	Course outcome	Subject outcome	Method of verification
	[ZARZMU2_U01] Students can analyze and creatively interpret complex social and economic processes in business decision-making. They use structured knowledge and tools from management, quality sciences, economics, and finance.	The student is able to use the theory of management and quality science, economics, and finance to recognize, diagnose, and solve problems related to financial decisions in organizations and the management of financial institutions, using the appropriate selection of sources and adapting existing or developing new methods to prepare the content of a master's thesis.	[SU1] oral statement/conversation/discussion [SU3] text preparation/written work
	[ZARZMU2_U02] The student can identify complex issues related to the organization's operations, the processes within it, and its relationships with a changing environment, proposing appropriate and innovative solutions.	The student is able to correctly interpret complex technological, social, political, legal, economic, and environmental processes and phenomena and their impact on financial decisions in organizations, the functioning of organizations, and the economy as a whole, using the appropriate selection of sources for the purposes of research in a master's thesis.	[SU1] oral statement/conversation/discussion [SU3] text preparation/written work
	[ZARZMU2_W06] The student possesses a thorough understanding of the principles of rational decision-making related to individual resources, functional areas within the organization, processes, and management levels. This understanding is based on a well-structured and theory-supported foundation in management, quality sciences, economics, and finance.	The student has in-depth knowledge and understanding of research methodology and terminology in the field of management and quality science, economics, and finance necessary to write a master's thesis, particularly in the area of management, economics, and finance.	[SW1] oral statement/conversation/discussion [SW3] text preparation/written work
	[ZARZMU2_K01] The student is prepared to gain and enhance the knowledge required to solve both cognitive and practical problems, particularly in the areas of management and quality sciences. Additionally, the student is capable of critically evaluating the knowledge and content received and will seek guidance from experts if they encounter difficulties in resolving a problem independently.	The student is ready to assess and critically approach complex situations and phenomena related to financial management in organizations, accounting, financial institution management, and financial institution strategies while preparing his master's thesis.	[SK1] oral statement/conversation/discussion [SK3] text preparation/written work
	[ZARZMU2_U07] Students can create detailed written papers, including reviews, analyses, or research, along with presentations and oral discussions on management topics.	The student can independently and as part of a team prepare analyses, diagnoses, and reports (including a master's thesis) on financial management in organizations, accounting, financial institution management, and financial institution strategy, and present them in a communicative manner using IT and communication tools.	[SU1] oral statement/conversation/discussion [SU3] text preparation/written work
