Subject objectives	In the context of ongoing migration processes in Poland, the lecture offers insight into the logic of their impact on language and culture. The first part of the lecture will focus on how migration is perceived from the perspective of public and scientific discourse (deficit and resource-based) and possible conceptual approaches to the language-culture-migration triad. Based on this combination, the second part of the lecture will present reflections and solutions in the field of language, civic and intercultural education.
