Subject contents	Problems of exercises Acquainting students with the problems of works that are considered the canon of world literature in the 20th century. The selection of texts should make them aware of the dynamics of historical and literary processes, which result in writing strategies practiced in the 20th and 21st centuries, and expose the cultural specificity of individual national literatures. The dialectics of unification within the framework of the historical process and cultural difference should lead to the recognition of the functional nature of a literary work. The substantive content includes the issues of internal dependencies, influences, and the broadly understood relationality of texts of individual national literatures, co-creating a map of common historical and literary processes and designating the category of canonical works within world literature.

Prerequisites and co-requisites	The condition for participation in the classes is obtaining a credit for 19th century general literature in the semester immediately preceding the subject. In exceptional cases, the person conducting the classes may depart from this rule. The ability to analyze and interpret literary works, knowledge of the history of Polish literature and general literature of periods preceding the literary era discussed in a given semester. In the case of foreign students, knowledge of Polish is required to enable understanding of the content presented during the classes and active participation in them.
