Subject objectives	The aim of the course is to deepen students' understanding of the administrative and legal aspects of an individual's status within the state. The course familiarizes students with the legal regulations governing natural persons in the Polish legal system, particularly in the areas of citizenship, civil status, population registration, identity documents, and other forms of administrative-legal identification. It also aims to develop students' skills in interpreting legal provisions, analyzing case law, and solving practical case studies, enabling them to identify and resolve legal issues related to the legal position of individuals in their interactions with public administration.
